Federal lawsuit against Georgia dismissed

A federal judge has dismissed a lawsuit seeking to halt the certification of Georgia's election.

"Georgia's historic first statewide audit reaffirmed that the state's new secure paper ballot voting system accurately counted and reported results," said Secretary Raffensperger. "This is a credit to the hard work of our county and local elections officials who moved quickly to undertake and complete such a momentous task in a short period of time."

Biden now has 306 electoral votes to President Donald Trump's 232.

The Trump campaign issued a defiant statement in response to news organizations calling Georgia on Thursday attributed to Jenna Ellis, the Trump campaign senior legal advisor, that reads:

"Headlines are already falsely reporting that Joe Biden is declared the winner in Georgia. Sorry, media, that's not how it works. The State of Georgia has not certified its results, and it should not. This so-called hand recount went exactly as we expected because Georgia simply recounted all of the illegal ballots that had been included in the total. We continue to demand that Georgia conducts an honest recount, which includes signature matching. We intend to pursue all legal options to ensure that only legal ballots are counted."

Secretary of State Brad Raffensperger is expected to announce the certification of the election Friday morning from the State Capitol. Raffensperger was cleared Thursday from quarantine after four negative COVID-19 tests.

Trump won Georgia by 5 percentage points in 2016 over Democrat Hillary Clinton.
